Permit system extended to all area industry

Amidst conflicting opinion and advice, directors of the Bay Area Air Pollution Control District yesterday barely agreed to extend their now-limited permit system to all industry in the region.

But directors deferred making any decision on the heart of the change — setting of annual permit fees to be levied on industry to pay for the $500,000-per-year administrative costs of the program.

District permits to construct and operate (with no fees attached) have been required only for industry new to the Bay Area since 1972, but the change made yesterday eliminates the grandfather clause that excluded from the permit system industry here prior to that date.

The district's parent unit — the California Air Resources Board which controls $1 million in state grants to the district — told the agency to make the change, and staff members there think it's a good idea.

But some members of the governing board of directors and the district's own advisory council are less than enthusiastic.

Consequently, it was approved by the 18-member board of directors with the minimum 10 votes necessary to change a district regulation.

In a recent evaluation of the district, the state Air Resources Board said the permits should be extended to all industry. District staff members agreed, arguing that extension of the permits would provide the district with an additional enforcement tool, more information about sources of pollution in the Bay Area, and a shifting of the entire permit system's administrative costs from the public to the industries doing the polluting.

But while making no recommendations on the benefit of shifting administrative costs to industry, the district's advisory council concluded that extension of the permits as an enforcement tool "is probably of minimal significance." And in terms of information on polluters, the council stated that extension of the permit system "will duplicate to a large extent the information that is currently obtained" through other district programs.

District Director Elwon Lance, a Martinez city councilman, argued that the plan would be a burden on small business and industry since the proposed permit fees were to be raised from large and small industry equally.

"These small companies have problems enough," said Lance. "It (extension of the permit system) is just a pure, unadulterated pollution tax on them and we've already imposed other controls."

But with Lance and two other board members dissenting, the board approved the extended permit system minus the fee structure by a vote of 10 to 3. Alameda County Supervisor Tom Bates voted in favor of the system and the county's other representative, Union City Councilman Dick Oliver, abstained since he owns and operates a service station that would be affected and since he missed most of the discussion.

As approved, the new permit system will be implemented gradually beginning July 1, 1977, through the next four years beginning with large industry and leaving small business and industry to last.

District staff members and the advisory council are scheduled to re-study the permit fees and report back to the board before the new system goes into effect next July. Board members also asked that other district programs be combined with the permit system to avoid any duplication of information gathering.

Promotion

Effective Feb. 1, Robert G. Wilhelm will move to the headquarters office of Carter Hawley Hale Stores, Inc. in Los Angeles to become an executive vice president. Wilhelm, who is also a director of the parent company, is presently chairman of its Emporium-Capwell division of Hale Stores, where he began his retailing career 30 years ago.

TWA founder dead at 78

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — Edward A. Bellande, one of the founders of Northrop Aircraft Co. and Trans World Airlines, died Wednesday of heart failure at Century City Hospital. He was 78.

Funeral plans were incomplete.

Bellande, who was copilot when Charles Lindbergh flew TWA's first transcontinental flight, also was a test pilot with Lockheed Aircraft Corp.

He retired in 1975 from the Garrett Corp. where he was chairman of the board and chief executive officer.

Bellande is survived by his widow, Molly.

Hotels indicted for price-fixing

HONOLULU (UPI) — A federal grand jury has indicted nine hotel corporations and the Hawaii Hotel Association on charges of price-fixing and violating the Sherman Anti-Trust Act.

The U.S. Attorney's office Wednesday concurrently filed a civil suit against seven hotel companies and the association asking that the defendants be enjoined permanently from fixing prices as alleged.

Named as defendants in the indictment were ITT-Sheraton of America and five other Sheraton corporations, the Hilton Hotel Corporation, Cinerama Hawaii hotels, Flagship International, and the association.

Named in the civil suit were Sheraton, Hilton, Western International, Cinerama Hawaii, Flagship International, Interisland resorts, Island Holidays and the association.

Both the suit and the indictment charged that the alleged violations occurred "sometime prior to 1966" until at least Dec. 20, 1974. The defendants were charged with exchanging current and future information about room rates "for the purpose of fixing, maintaining and stabilizing" room rates at artificial and non-competitive levels.

No damages were sought by the suit except for payment of costs of the trial.

The indictments were the third in the past year by the federal government against the Hawaii visitor industry for alleged violations of the Sherman act.

Company's ad business booms

SAN DIEGO (UPI) — The advertising business is enjoying what may be the best year in its history, according to Karl Eller, president of Combined Communications Corp.

"Our company has been the beneficiary of a fantastic year in broadcast, outdoor and newspaper advertising," Eller said in an address to the Stockbrokers Society.

"Nine-month results for 1976 have exceeded full-year results for 1975. We are up in great percentages, all over the lot."

His Phoenix-based corporation owns nine radio and seven television stations, an outdoor advertising firm and recently purchased the Cincinnati Enquirer. He said the newspaper's profits "added greatly" to the parent firm's.

"In the first nine months of 1976 we have a net of $7.3 million on revenues of $35 million," he said.

His corporation would like to buy more newspapers, he said.

"They are very lucrative but it is tough. They are big, cost a lot and are rarely up for sale."

Firm can't reclaim plane

LOS ANGELES (UPI) — A federal judge has issued a temporary restraining order that prevents McDonnell Douglas Aircraft Co. from taking possession of an Air Siam DC10 jetliner.

Leasing agents for McDonnell Douglas claimed Air Siam defaulted on lease payments. Air Siam, Thailand's flag carrier, operates between Bangkok and Honolulu via Tokyo and Hong Kong.

U.S. District Court Judge Robert M. Takasugi Tuesday enjoined McDonnell Douglas from hindering Air Siam or its agents from taking physical control of the aircraft now at a Los Angeles International Airport hanger.

The judge also enjoined the firm from issuing statements indicating Air Siam "has defaulted upon lease payments and or that defendants have terminated the lease and have taken repossession of the aircraft for failure by Air Siam to make prompt monthly payments as called for by the lease."
